

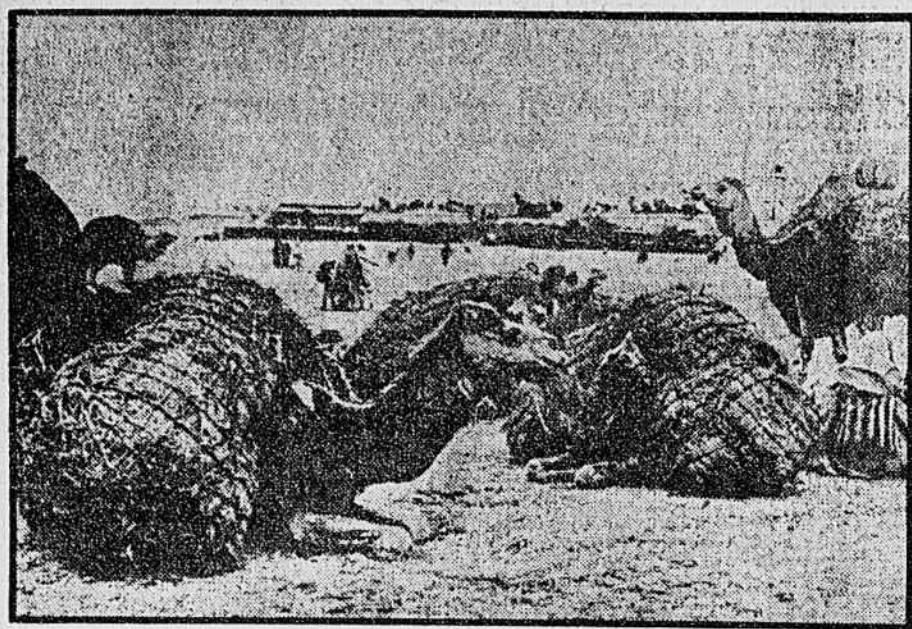

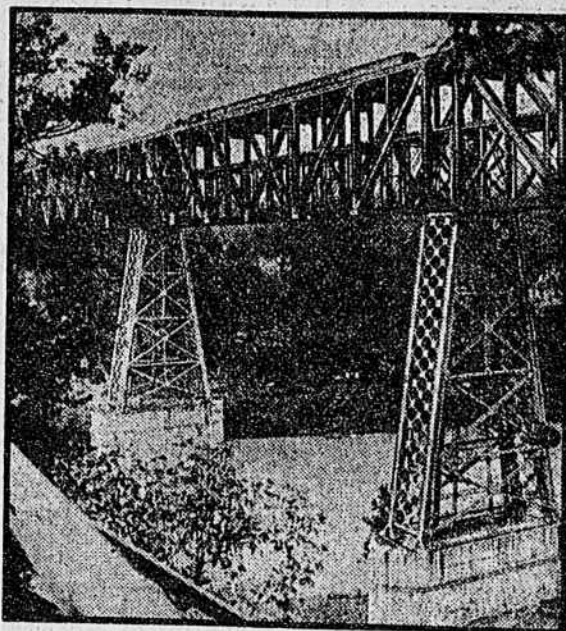

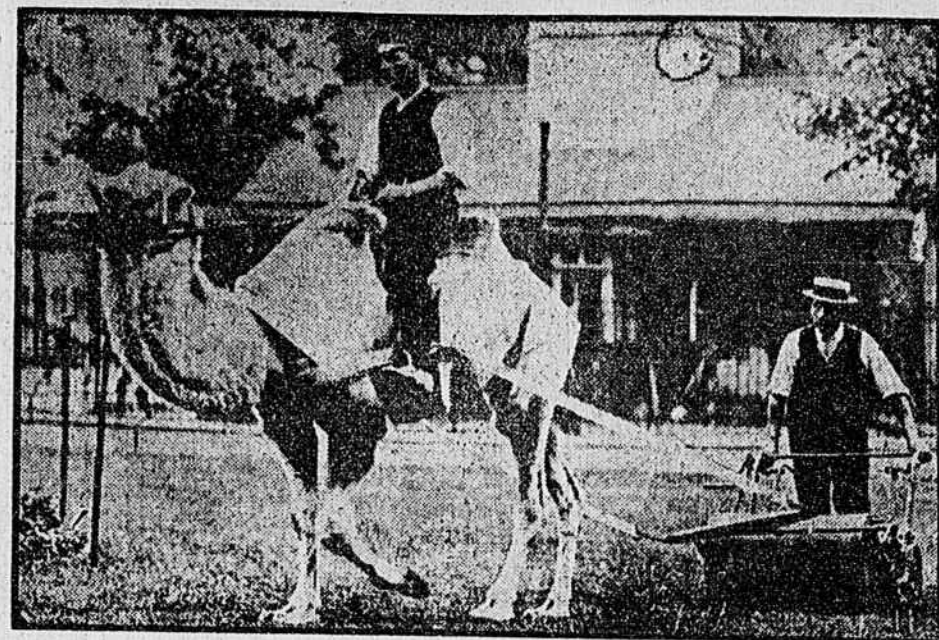

Photographic Gleanings From World's News of Week

Esparto grass loaded on the backs of camels to be transported to the coast of Tripoli.

The first train going over the newly completed bridge at Lexington, Ky., over the Kentucky River. The bridge was built by the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Railway, at the cost of $1,250,000. It is the highest bridge constructed over a navigable stream in America.

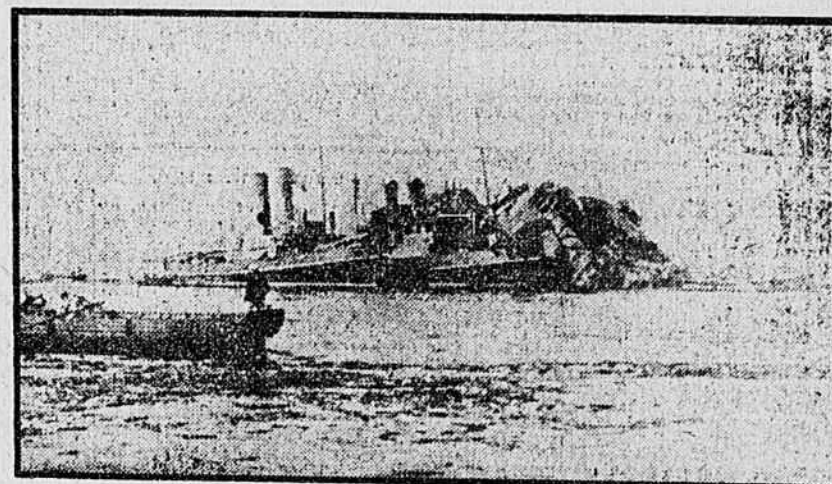

A camel is now being used on the lawn mower at the London Zoo.

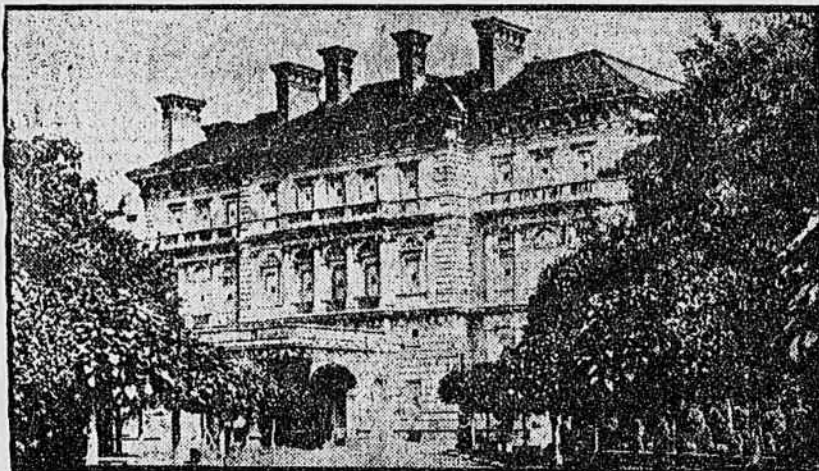

One of the industries of Tripoli is the growing and exporting of esparto grass, used for making paper and cord.

A recent Socialist demonstration in Berlin.

The wreck of the battleship Liberte, of the French Navy.

A large section of the grounds around The Breakers, Mrs. Cornelius Van derbilt's beautiful summer home at Newport, R. I., is in grave danger of falling into the sea.

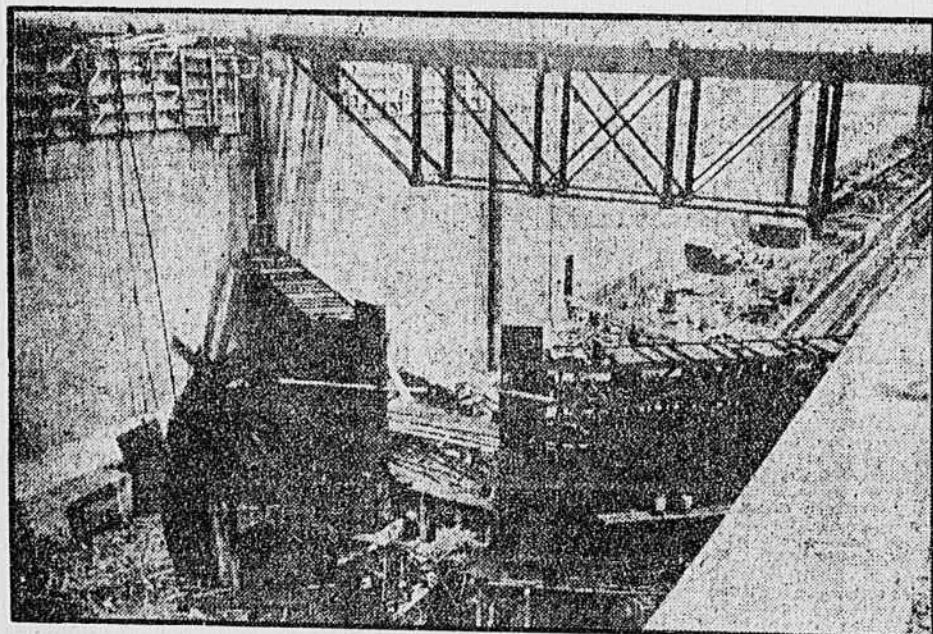

The farmerettes of England, employed at Glynde, on the farm of Mrs. Frances Wolsley, in Sussex.

The largest cheese ever made was recently completed at Appleton, Wis. It weighs 12,361 pounds, containing 12,000 pounds of curd, 330 pounds of salt and thirty-one pounds of rennet, but not an ounce of coloring. It cost between $5,500 and $6,000.

These are the first of the great lock gates to be erected at Panama. They are of massive steel, eighty-two feet high, sixty-five feet wide and seven feet thick. Each of these gates will weigh about 750 tons when completed.

Christopher Columbus Day was celebrated in thirteen States on October 12; this statue of the discoverer stands in Genoa, his home city.

Transferring 5,000 fish from Lake Kenosha, N. Y., to lakes three miles distant in autos and wagons.

Endeavoring to return the wrecked English ship Mayfly to its shed. Automobile which killed nine persons State and injured fourteen at Syracuse, N. Y.; Farmerettes on the farm of Mrs. Frances Wolsley, returning home after a day's work

ces Wolsley, returning home after a day's work